The server that is running Windows SBS 2003 cannot be found. Verify the following before you continue:

Ensure that the client computer has a wired network connection to the Windows SBS network.

If you have a router performing DHCP services on your network, verify that the router is configured to use the computer running Windows SBS as the primary DNS server. For more information about router configuration settings, see Appendix C of "Getting Started" at http://go.microsoft.com/fwlink/?LinkId=34392.

If you use a public proxy server to browse the Internet, clear the Internet Explorer connection setting for using a proxy server. To do this, from the Tools menu, click Internet Options, click the Connections tab, click the LAN Settings button, and then clear the check box in Proxy Server.

The server that is running Windows SBS 2003 cannot be found. Verify the following before you continue:

Ensure that the client computer has a wired network connection to the Windows SBS network.

If you have a router performing DHCP services on your network, verify that the router is configured to use the computer running Windows SBS as the primary DNS server. For more information about router configuration settings, see Appendix C of "Getting Started" at http://go.microsoft.com/fwlink/?LinkId=34392.

If you use a public proxy server to browse the Internet, clear the Internet Explorer connection setting for using a proxy server. To do this, from the Tools menu, click Internet Options, click the Connections tab, click the LAN Settings button, and then clear the check box in Proxy Server.
